

Ana Giselle Rosas de Vallarino

Ana Giselle Rosas de Vallarino is the Executive Director of the Panama Cooperative Institute (IPACCOOP), the government entity responsible for the development and execution of Panama's co-op strategy.

She is an attorney with Masters Degrees in Public Management, in Government and Leadership and in IT Administration.

She completed the Program on Women and Power from Harvard University's Kennedy School of Government.

One of IPACCOOP's major areas of focus is the promotion of a generational change within the co-op movement by empowering youth and creating new leadership.